

Daily Devotion For October 25, 2021

“Once I was blind, but now I see...” John 9:25

Today, Ellie Hattori will be going through her second cataract surgery in the past several weeks. I’m not sure how it is with Ellie, but I have had problems reading road signs and I often have to call upon Sherry to read the labels on cans for directions.

I have been told that the lens of the eye works much like a camera lens, adjusting for both changing light conditions and the eye’s focus, letting us see things more clearly. A cataract is a clouding of the eye’s natural lens, which, over time, may grow larger, clouding more of the lens and making it harder to see.

Often times our own spiritual vision can become cloudy. When we look at other people we may allow our own prejudices to cloud our vision. The first step toward clear spiritual vision is described in the song, “Open the Eyes of My Heart” by Paul Baloche:

Open the eyes of my heart Lord,
Open the eyes of my heart,
I want to see You.

Thought For Today: How is your vision? When we clearly see Jesus, He performs the radical surgery necessary for us to see the world as He sees it.

Today’s Prayer Focus: Take time to pray that God will help you to see Him and others clearly. Review this week’s updated prayer fuel. Deo Volente.