

Daily Devotion For December 13, 2021

"a great wind came across the wilderness and struck the four corners of the house, and it fell upon the young people" Job 1:10

I was shocked when I saw on the news just how much damage tornado's in Kentucky, Arkansas, and various places across the south had caused. As of this writing, 100's of people have lost their lives and thousands of others have been injured and are left homeless.

As officials continue to assess the damage from severe weather in multiple locations, may we as Christians join together in prayer for those who have been devastated by these terrible tornados. Our hearts are broken for those who have lost family members, friends, houses, and businesses, and right now it is so important that believers lift up these people in prayer. So many have been injured. So much property has been destroyed. But we know that God "heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds" Psalm 147:3

Thought for Today: Natural disasters remind us that we are not in control. Are you recovering from a "disaster" in your own life? What specifically do you need? What can you do to help provide for those who are facing disaster in their lives?

Today's Prayer Focus: Pray for those devastated by the tornado's and storms in the south and east coast. Take time to review this week's updated prayer fuel. Deo Volente.
