“Wait for the LORD; be strong, and let your heart take courage; wait for the LORD!” Psalm 27:14

The Midterm elections were held two days ago and, in many races, the outcome is still up in the air. Like many Americans, on Tuesday night I kept my eye on the election results to see what direction our nation will be headed in the next couple of years. Across our country and around the world people are waiting to see who will control the congress and the senate.

Waiting is often one of the hardest things we have to do. If we do not see immediate results, it's easy to give up, assuming we will never receive answers. It can seem that our needs will never be met and our burdens will never be lifted.

But the Bible teaches us to expectantly “wait on the Lord.” We are not to be afraid or worried. Rather, we are to “be of good courage.” As we look to God and wait for Him, the Bible promises that He will strengthen our hearts and revive our spirits.

Today, it may seem that God is not hearing your prayers, or that your problems never will be solved. But don't give up or be discouraged. Rather, be bold and courageous. Have faith.

Thought For Today: Continue to commit your needs to Him. Trust Him, and keep seeking Him. Believe that His promises are true and that your prayers will be answered. As you wait on Him, He will strengthen you, provide for your needs, and grant you victory.

Today's Prayer Focus: Pray for our nation and a peaceful result of this year's election. Deo Volente.
